SUMMARY: (Enter concise summary of report. Give significance in final one-sentence paragraph. List inclosures at lower left. Begin text of report on AF Form 112—Part II.)
At 2036 hours (PST), 25 September 1950, Captain [REDACTED] and 2d Lieut. [REDACTED], navigators, 2d Bombardment Squadron, 22d Bombardment Wing (M), March Air Force Base, California, were standing outside the Mt. Palomar Observatory, Los Angeles, California at an elevation of 6000 feet observing the movement of the celestial bodies when they saw what appeared to be a shooting star above the handle of the Big Dipper, fifteen degrees above the horizon. The object, observed at a great distance, moved at a great rate of speed from approximately 310° to 100° horizontally, in two to three minutes, emitting a loud, swirling, whooshing noise similar to a rocket exhaust. The only part of the object visible was a bluish-white light which flickered intermittently; the light appearing to be the size of a star.
