SUMMARY (Enter concise summary of report. Give significance in final one-sentence paragraph. List references at lower left. Begin text of report on AF Form 112a.)
1. On 6 March 1954 at 1745 hours [redacted] and two companions were playing near the home of the former in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. They happened to look up and observed a bright, round, silver object in the southwest sky at an elevation of about thirty-five (35) degrees. They watched the object perform a series of arcs and rises until it disappeared behind the clouds about thirty-five (35) minutes later. By that time it was dark. The object made no noise and had no visible details except an exhaust trail which appeared when the object moved and a red glow which appeared on its leading edge when it stopped. The object remained motionless between the above described maneuvers. 2. The boys summoned a neighbor, [redacted], who watched the object for a short time and gave the opinion that it was an evening star which appeared to move because of the clouds passing under it. 3. Considering the unusual details and behavior which the object was reported to exhibit and due to the fact that the visible stars and planets would not have been in sight at the time the object was first observed, the opinion has been reached that this object cannot be positively identified with any object normally classified as familiar.

8. Other unusual activities or conditions:

a. At the time of the sighting, searchlights of commercial enterprises had been in use for the purpose of attracting business. This possibility was suggested to the observers but was dismissed by them as a possible explanation. This also would not account for the red glow appearing on the object, nor the fact that it was obscured by the clouds.

b. Large weather balloons and advertising balloons released at distant points have from time to time been sighted in this area, but these do not offer an explanation for the peculiar maneuvers of the object nor the fact that it emitted a bright silver light under normally dim light conditions.

c. The planet Jupiter, usually visible in the southwest section of the sky at approximately the elevation of the unidentified object, and one of the brightest planets, probably would not have been visible at the time the object was first sighted.

9. Negative

10. Negative

11. Five minutes after disappearance of the object, two single-engine military aircraft passed over heading west at a low altitude.

12. Comments of preparing officer:

a. Minor discrepancies appeared in the statements of the observers as to the exact color, size, and movements of the object. These alone, however, do not alter the fact that all of the observers saw the same unusual object in the same place at the same time.

b. Since investigations and inquiries have failed to positively identify the object as a star, weather balloon, or other familiar object, it is felt that it must be tentatively classified as unidentified.
