10. BRIEF SUMMARY OF SIGHTING Object submitted in September subsequent to decay of Sputnik IV. Witness claimed object was glowing red until it was between 100-200 ft from ground. Object then fell to ground. Object was recovered within minutes and was still hot with the center portion glowing red. Believed to be meteorite. Stored in garage until Sputnik decay made news. See specimen 7-3745-465		11. COMMENTS Object not meteor. Consists of ordinary granite. No indication of subjection to heat as indicated. If object was observed it was not the rock submitted. Physical Specimen, rock of terrestrial origin. Sighting evaluated as an obvious hoax. SAC

This object was discovered by a Mr [REDACTED], West Manchester, Ohio. [REDACTED] He described it's discovery under the following conditions:

Around the first part of April at approx 2130 Hours H. observed a glowing red object in the sky. It glowed a bright red until approx 100 to 200 feet from the ground. The object was observed to fall in a field close to his position. He recovered the object within a few minutes. It was still hot and in the center portion was still glowing red. He believed it to be a part of a meteorite.

Note: The object was broken when it fell from a desk. The paint spots on it were as a result of it being stored in a ^{garage} since its discovery.
