Green Flash Over Cincinnati

On May 3, 1962, at 8 p.m. a bright greenish-white flash spread across the southern Cincinnati sky. Reports generally agreed its light was visible for three to 10 seconds; that the object or light had a luminous tail and traveled horizontally toward the southwest. The object, described by witnesses as "rocket-shaped," "a soft blue puff," huge in front, skinny at the end" and "a huge ball of fire with a tail, sort of greenish," or "no particular shape," was at an elevation of 30 degrees in the south, traveling from southeast to southwest. Although the object was explained as a possible "meteor," the Cincinnati Enquirer noted that no one had a ready explanation at the time of the sighting. Reports also came from Wheeling, W. Va., and Columbus and Dayton, Ohio airports also received reports.

Another convert

The Newcastle Journal on May 10 reported how a disbeliever in flying saucers was confronted with evidence that he could no longer ignore. The account reads as follows:

"Until yesterday, Mr. John Carr did not believe in flying saucers. Now he's not so sure. His doubts began in the small hours of yesterday morning when he was getting ready for bed at his home in Deanham Gardens, Fenham, Newcastle.

Mr. Carr, a 28-year-old salesman, looked out of the bedroom window towards Westerhope and saw a large bright object which appeared to come close and then move away. Thinking he was seeing things, he roused his younger brother, 18-year-old Colin.

"Mr. Carr told the Journal: 'Colin saw it, too, and we still can't figure it out. I don't believe in flying saucers and am prepared to accept any logical explanation for it, but none is forthcoming.

"When I tell people of what I have seen they begin to tell me I'm a fool, then I tell them my brother also saw it and they change their minds.' He thinks that it could not have been an aeroplane because of the overcast sky. It grew larger while he and his brother watched, then disappeared. 'I don't want people to think I'm cranky. I would like to know if anyone else saw something similar. I have ridiculed these stories of flying saucers in the past. Now, well, I just don't know.

Tokushima-Ken, Japan

TOKUSHIMA-KEN, JAPAN-May 10, 1962..A 20-yr old farmer saw three orange-glowing objects which approached at a speed less than ordinary aircraft speed from SE to NW. They were crescent-shaped and glowing a very brilliant orange. The objects were about the size of a dodgeball. No sound or trail. Duration 3 min. (Note similarity to recent Hawaiian sighting.)

12 May 1962
Lexington, Massachusetts

Previously a May 12, 1962 report of four similiar looking objects, looking like aluminum-colored round-topped circular saucers were seen and reported to me, as they moved slowly north near a transport plane leaving Hanscom Air Force Base. In all three of these New England sightings the mystery objects were seen under good weather conditions and showed good clear edges. The description (parachute--shaped) in almost a half-dozen sightings near the vicinity of Hanscom Air Force Base was repeated time and time again.

Upon contacting Hanscom Field authorities there stated that there had been no sightings of 'flying saucers' or UFOs over or near Hanscom in recent weeks.

Either the eyewitnesses didn't report their sightings to the Air Force for fear of ridicule or due to censorship orders, or Hanscom Air Force officials were unable to see these objects reported by so many other people, which is highly doubtful.

May 12--Boston Patent Lawyer Robert K. Randall reported four parachute shaped, aluminum-colored, round objects near a transport plane leaving Hanscom Field near Lexington, Mass.
