Observer sighted nine white lights that were about the same intensity as stars. The night was foggy and hazy and not stars were visible. The lights were in a "V" shape going NW, as they turned W they straightened to dive and then resumed the "V" shape. Observer mentioned that there was a glow in the air from the city lights. No noise was heard at any time.

Dear Sirs:

On Oct. 28, at 8:37 P.M., I saw a formation of flying objects. There seemed to be nine. They came from the south east in a formation like a blunt wedge, with two out in a line on the port side. At the mid point of the sighting, when they were almost overhead, they swerved due west. Before turning, they spread out in a loose line, straight, but in groups of two and three. After turning they reformed the blunt wedge, this time with none out on the side.

The objects glowed white but pulsated. They appeared as large points of light, somewhat bigger than my periods. They grew dim as they went out of sight. They seemed to be over two miles altitude, and moving several hundred miles per hour. No engine noises or sounds of any sort.

The night was clear, except for some haze around the coast. There was some glow in the air from the city lights. I spotted them from a walkway that leads in back of the San Francisco Golf Club, in a dark area between the rough and a freeway. There was nothing that obstructed my vision at any time.

I have heard what a person's mental state, so; startled, but curious.
