Anti-Gravity

By Richard L. Clark, Ph.D.

Anti-gravity is relatively proportionate to the charge of the mass of a body with respect to the charge of a planet's mass.

This is the basic fact of the DePalma, Searl, and Townsend experiments and designs.

All of these men create capacitive elements, via charge of spinning charge, to make anti-gravity units relative to the planet Earth.

The general law is simply: Anti-gravity can be generated in any mass of matter if the poles of the atomic fields are aligned in a linear polarity. This is exactly like the molecular alignment necessary in magnetic domains to produce magnetism in a bar magnet.

Interestingly, the bumble bee is an excellent example of this natural fact. Its wings are electrostatic generators in an air medium and it is an anti-gravity flier.

Let us now make a repeatable, scientific experiment using any five humans as an anti-gravity system.

Four standing people form a small square, with the fifth person, preferably Dr. Feynman or Dr. Wheeler, sitting on a stool or chair in the center.

All face in the same direction.

In unison, all five must bend at the waist while exhaling all of the air from their lungs. Then, all five straighten up in unison while inhaling deeply.

This bending and straightening sequence is repeated at least seven times.

On the seventh bending/exhaling, the two people in front each place one index finger under each knee of the seated person.

At the same time, the two people in the rear each place an index finger under each armpit of the seated person.

Then, as the five straighten up and inhale for the seventh time, the four lift the seated person over their heads effortlessly, using only their index fingers.

The unison breathing and bending causes the atoms in the air to be lined up and an anti-gravity system is created by this simple exercise.

Be careful when doing this experiment not to panic in surprise; calmly perform the experiment as described, taking turns as the lifted person.

You will like the weightless feeling when lifted.

After doing this experiment it will be obvious that I can build (as the major governments of the world are building) flying saucers with anti-gravity systems.

It is observation again of nature, neutral centers, and standing columnar waves -- not the propaganda of supposed science in the establishment bastions of Princeton, Stanford, MIT or CIT.

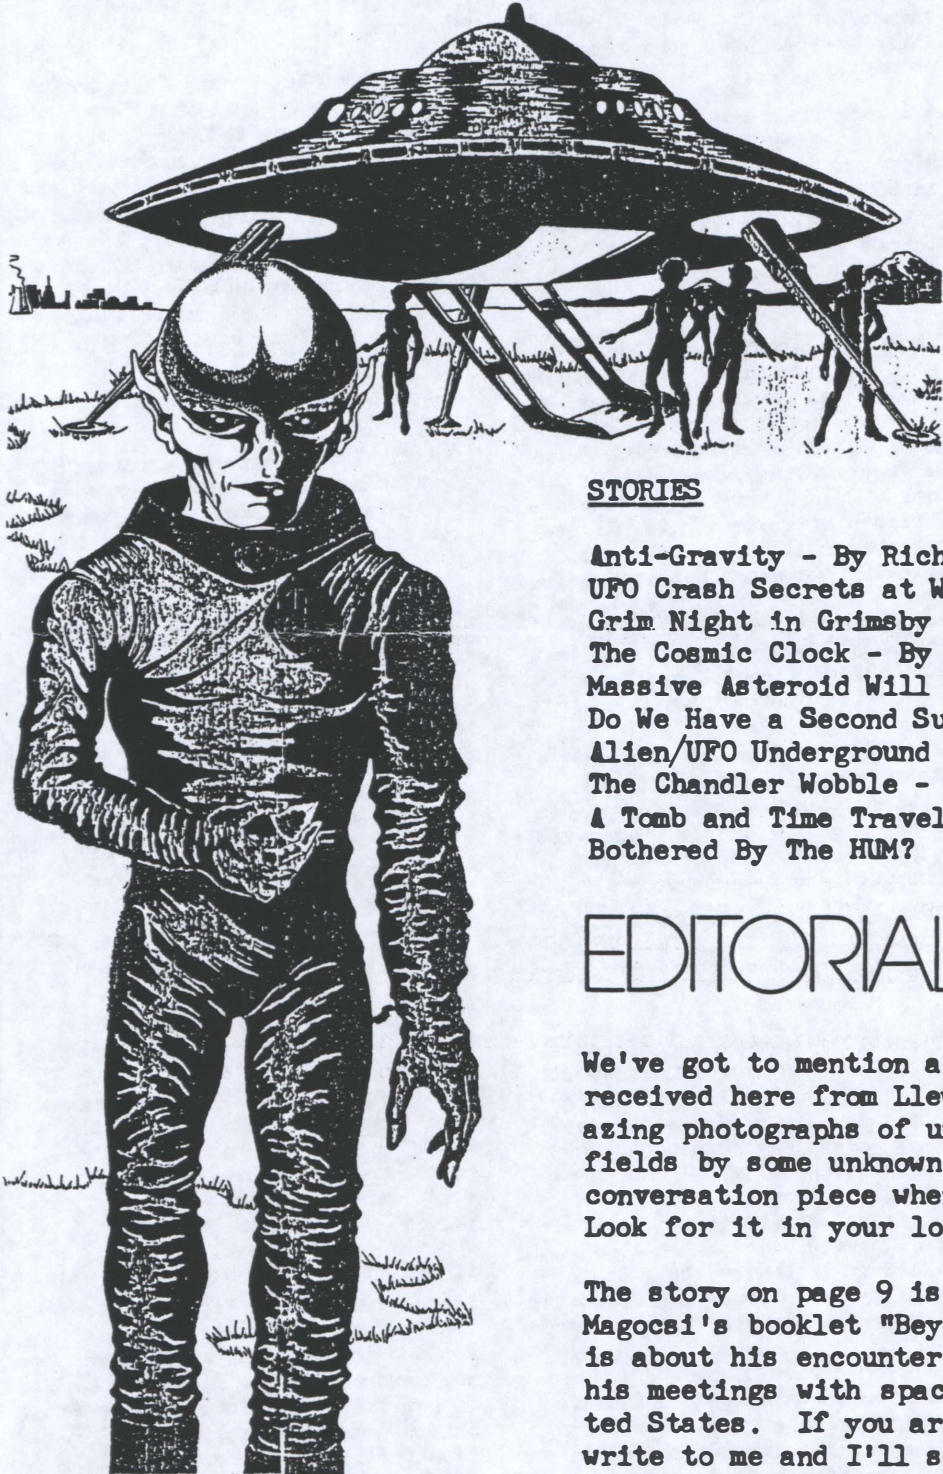

The impact of the above new physics law changes all concepts of gravity, inertia, electricity, magnetism, time, space, etc. completely.

This is not an addition, revision, or expansion of current physics; it is a new physics.

Moving a 60-ton clock for the Great Pyramid or Stonehenge is now simple to explain or do.

Designing radically new transportation, free energy, and totally non-hydrocarbon and non-nuclear systems for all of our needs is practical and possible with this basic system.

Physics today is an elegant treatment of the least common state of raw, random nature in the entropy state. Now we can engineer the basic forces of the universe via information and intelligence -- negative entropy.

We've got to mention a beautiful crop circle calendar received here from Llewellyn Publications. Twelve amazing photographs of unbelievable designs carved into fields by some unknown force. This makes for a great conversation piece when friends drop in and see it. Look for it in your local bookstore. (See page 16)

The story on page 9 is a chapter excerpted from Oscar Magocsi's booklet "Beyond My Space Odyssey." The book is about his encounter with a Psychean apparition and his meetings with space beings in Canada and the United States. If you are interested in reading more, write to me and I'll send you more information on how to obtain a copy.

ATTACK OF THE JELLYFISH

Schools of jellyfish attacked hundreds of swimmers along the French Riviera during a hot July weekend. It was blamed on climatic warming. Fishermen in nearby water complained of the jellyfish packing their nets instead of fish.

Another bunch of jellyfish smothered the seawater cooling system intake at a Japanese nuclear power plant on July 7/99, forcing operators to cut output by nearly 30%.

In northern Argentina, a mother and daughter were stung to death by Africanised killer bees, near the tourist town of Rio Hondo in the northern province of Santiago del Estero.

Hundreds of people flocked to the Tim Horton's doughnut shop in Bras D'Or, Cape Breton Island, to see a Christ-like image that had inexplicably appeared on an outside wall. It was said to be clearly visible to staff at a restaurant across the road under the shop's floodlights. When the light was removed, you could see it towards the side of the building, as if the image had moved.

Dozens of believers in Riverview, New Brunswick, Canada, have claimed to see an image of the Virgin Mary's face through weathered paint on the back of a pizza billboard in nearby Lower Coverdale, but a Roman Catholic priest can't see the resemblance and finds it offensive that other people do. "There is no veil or face on the sign that I can see," said Rev. Dan Bohan. "It's just a crescent-shaped thing with a dark stain in front and a light one behind it."

Tammie Lepard only found her wedding ring because a carrot had grown through it. The $200 ring, lost for three years, was unearthed by Mrs. Lepard's mother, Agnes Thauberger, while digging carrots for dinner on the Lepard's farm near the hamlet of Erskine, Alberta. The carrot, with the ring around it, was served as a side dish to a delighted Mrs. Lepard, along with a main course of shepherd's pie. Although buried three seasons, the ring cleaned up nicely.

A 10.4-metre diameter stone circle discovered last summer in Dade County, Florida, is believed to be the foundation of a ceremonial lodge built by Tequesta Indians who inhabited Florida centuries before the arrival of Europeans.

A municipal court judge who claimed a denture solvent made him seem drunk fought a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol. Claude Fortin, from St. Jean-Chrysostome, near Quebec City in Canada, was stopped by two police officers after leaving a bar last November in 1998. He admitted drinking two beers but said he had washed his dentures in a new solvent earlier that day. A biochemist has testified the solvent made higher alcohol levels register on the breathalyser.

STARSHIP ENTERPRISE ON THE RIGHT TRACK

By David Akin

Travelling through outer space at warp speed, a mode of transport utilised by the Starship Enterprise in STAR TREK, is theoretically possible according to the calculations of a Belgian physicist.

Chris van den Broeck, a theoretical physicist at Katholieke Universiteit in Leuven, Belgium, argues that, in theory, a spaceship could travel faster than the speed of light if encased in something called a "warp bubble."

"I show how a minor modification of the Alcubierre geometry can dramatically improve the total energy requirements for a warp bubble that can be used to transport macroscopic objects," Prof. van den Broeck says in a paper posted at the Web site of the Los Alamos

Residents of a seacoast town in the state of Maine were terrorised by a little girl and her doll after the doll prompted a fishmonger to turn a knife on himself. An FBI agent tracked the girl to her home where her mother was hitting herself with a hammer. The agent tossed the china doll inside the microwave and as it burned up the girl's mother regained her senses.

Mandy, a 60-year-old doll, arrived at the Quesnel and District Museum in Prince George, B.C. The doll gives people the creeps and "after seeing her, most visitors are never quite the same." The museum photographer, the day after he took a picture of the doll, reported an uneasy feeling and discovered his photo lab in disarray. Some wonder if Mandy is haunted.

Agricultural experts are stumped as to how pears came to grow on a Fuji apple tree. The orchardist found three others with the same phenomenon. A provincial government agriculturalist said, "It's definitely an oddity. It's the first time I've seen any thing like it."

Two Florida boaters met a real sea monster on Feb. 9/99 when their 90-horsepower motorboat was dragged for almost 2 hours in the Atlantic Ocean by a man-ta ray that weighed about 135 kilograms, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

National Laboratory (xxx.lanl.gov/abs/gr-qc/9905084).

The formula for a warp drive moving in a direction is: $ds^2 = -dt^2 - (dx - v_g(t)f(r_g)dt)^2 - dz^2$. "In the front of the bubble space-time contracts, in the back it expands, so that whatever is inside is surfing through space," Prof. van den Broeck writes in his paper. It's as simple as that. But while warp travel might be fine in theory, it may be a little unrealistic in practice, as even the professor concedes. For one thing, he says, neither he nor anyone else has figured a way to get the spaceship out of the bubble once the trip is over. "The first warp-drive flight is still a long way off but maybe it has become slightly less improbable," Professor van den Broeck wrote. (Cr: National Post, June 14, 1999)

UFO Crash Secrets

- At Wright Patterson AFB, Dayton, OH.

A history of crash/retrievals and the UFO cover-up.

Feb. 26, 1942 - Secret memo to the President from Chief of Staff, G.C. Marshall stating: UFOs appeared over Los Angeles, Calif., yesterday morning. The 37th Brigade (AA) expended 1430 rounds of ammunition against them. No bombs dropped, no casualties among our troops, no planes (UFOs) shot down, no Air Force or Navy planes were in action.

1944 - During WW2, E.L. (initials) serving as carpenter mate, A5, B3-C 1st class, Hdq.Co., 112th Construction Battalion, came across a landed saucer near a wooded ridge, near the beach of Kaneohe, Oahu, Hawaii. Description: 50 ft. in diameter, metallic, looked like an igloo, topped with a clear glass dome about a foot high with a gold-colored weather vane-like device spinning inside.

Sept. 4, 1946 - TOP SECRET MEMO to Mr. Morgan from Mr. Lyon stating: 800 reports (of UFOs) have been reported with new ones coming in daily from Sweden. Full details of these reports have been forwarded to Wash., D.C., by our military and Navy attaches.

Jan. 1947 - W.H. (initials) of Yucca Valley, Calif., while still serving in the U.S. navy, was on leave with C.C. (initials) who was just out of the U.S. army. While they were looking for desert property to buy they came upon the Papagos Indian Reservation, north of the Superstition Mountains, west of Globe, Arizona. While travelling on a dirt road, they came upon a group of military personnel guarding a crashed saucer half buried in the sand. Description: disc-shaped with a dome top, about 30-ft. diameter, two rings on its outer edge which seemed to have windows between them. There was no evidence of an encampment or heavy equipment.

July 2, 1947 - Magdalena, N.M., (west of Socorro) Mr. Barnett sighted a shiny object out in the desert and upon investigation, came upon a crashed disc-shaped object, 30-ft. across. Later, a military truck arrived to supervise the investigation of the crash site. Barnett saw bodies strewn about the crash site. They weren't wearing military uniforms, and in fact, didn't even look human. Seen from a distance, the bodies had on silvery suits and appeared to be about 3 to 3½ ft. tall.

July 7, 1947 - Secret operation to recover a crashed saucer in New Mexico 75 miles northwest of Roswell AFB. FBI, Dallas, sends teletype to director of FBI stating that a flying saucer crashed this date and was recovered near Roswell, N.M.

July 8, 1947 - The Roswell Army Air Force captured a downed flying saucer near Roswell, N.M. according to Maj. Marcel as reported in the Roswell Daily Record newspaper. Maj. J.A. Marcel was Intelligence officer at Roswell Air Force Base at the time.

July 8, 1947 - Urgent FBI memo from Gen. Roger Ramsey concerning "flying disc information", Maj. Curtan, HQ. 8th Air Force, telephoned daily and advised this office that an object reported to be a flying disc was recovered near Roswell, this date. Information provided this office because of national interest in case and fact that (certain media sources) attempting to break story of location of disc today.... (the recovered disc was) being transported to Wright Field by special plane for examination. Maj. Curtan advised, would request Wright Field to advise (FBI) results of examination.

July 15, 1947 - Memo to a Mr. Ladd with a hand-written note from J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the FBI stating: before agreeing (to investigation of crashed saucers) ...we must insist upon full access to disc crashed saucers. For instance in the Socorro, N.M. base the Army grabbed it and would not let us have it for cursory examination.

Sept. 24, 1947 - A covert operation, MAJESTIC-12 is established and classified TOP SECRET by President Truman. It consists of 12 persons selected to control all branches of government, both military and non-military. This ultimately led to silencing of UFO witnesses, confiscation of UFO photos, harrasing and debunking of witnesses.

Gene Duplantier

Nov. 30, 1947 - In a TOP SECRET DOCUMENT, Dr. Bronk's scientific team classifies the extraterrestrials as EEBs (Extra Terrestrial Entities). Sept. 19, 1947... the recovered crashed saucer in New Mexico is determined to be a short-range reconnaissance craft from a mother ship.

Dec. 30, 1947 - Project SIGN formed to obtain information about saucer performance characteristics and their purpose on Earth.

March 25, 1948 - The Army OSI and the IPU put on Red Alert and the ADC activated the local military units when a UFO crashed in the vicinity of Asteo, N.M. (N.W. corner of N.M.) When the saucer got into range of a special high-powered radar at the Four Corners Range (Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado), it began to flutter and wobble from side-to-side and took a dive towards the ground. It seems that the beam from this special radar had an ill-effect on the control system of the saucer. The 100-foot saucer crash-landed on Mr. H.D.'s property. H.D. and family were sworn to secrecy.

1948 - Capt. Postlethwaite of G-2 Air, cleared for Top Secret, received a TOP SECRET message incoming from 3rd Army HQ, Atlanta, directed to Commanding General, White Sands Proving Grounds. Message: Crash of a 100-ft. diameter saucer, 30-ft. high, One portal window blown, 5 aliens suffocated, each alien approx. 4-ft. in height, oversized heads, hull of craft paper-thin but impenetrable by conventional tools. Private property purchased to facilitate movement of recovered craft.

May 22, 1949 - "Secretary of the Navy, James Forrestal (MJ-3) is found dead after falling 16 floors from an insane asylum window. He shouted "We've been invaded!" before he fall to his death.

Dec. 6, 1950 - Another flying saucer crashed in the Indio-Guerrero area. The saucer is recovered and taken to the AEC facility at Sandia, N.M. 1950s late...the so-called Interplanetary Phenomenon Unit (IPU) was disestablished and all records were transferred to the Air Force.

July 30, 1952 - Operation Intercept...SECRET MEMO to Director, CIA., from office of Scientific Intelligence stating: ATIC has set up a worldwide reporting network for flying saucers and Major AFBs have been ordered to make interceptions of UFOs. Batelle Memorial Institute is to handle machine indexing of all official reported sightings. From 1947 to date, there have been 1,500 official sightings with 250 of them in 1952 alone. UFOs are of such importance that the matter should be brought before the National Security Council.

Aug. 1, 1952 - CIA memo from acting Chief of Weapons and Equipment Division: It is strongly urged, however, that no indication of CIA interest or concern by CIA reach the press or public.

1953 - Pilot (name withheld) stated... "A saucer crashed in a desert area". He was sure that it was just inside the Arizona border. He also saw the bodies first-hand at Wright Patterson AFB. The crates arrived at night by DC-7. Description of bodies: Approx. 4-ft. high...resting unshrouded on special blanket of dry ice. Heads were hairless, narrow, very large for their bodies. Skin had brown tint. Open eyes, small mouth, indistinct nose, hands and feet. Wore tight-fitting dark-colored suits. One alien appeared to be a female. The alien had been alive at the crash site but attempts to save its life with oxygen failed.

May 21, 1953 - Kingman, Ariz., Frits Werner, engineer at Wright-Patterson AFB, assisted in the investigation of a crashed UFO. It was constructed of unfamiliar metal, similar to aluminum and had impacted 20 inches into the sand without any signs of structural damage. It was oval-shaped and 30-ft. in diameter. An opened hatchway was 3 1/2 ft. long and 1/2 wide. Inside the craft were two swivel seats, oval cabin and lots of instrumentation and displays. A tent pitched nearby contained the corpse of the pilot. It was approx 4 ft tall and had a brown complexion, two eyes, a small round mouth, two nostrils (no nose) and two small ears. It wore a silvery-metallic-like suit and a skull cap of the same material.

1953 - Project XXXIX (name censored) established by President Eisenhower and renamed Project Aquarius.

Feb. 20, 1954 - President Eisenhower went to see the captured saucers and recovered bodies at Edwards AFB Hangar-18. Between 6:30 and 7:15 pm, a saucer crashed in the desert near Bandalier, N.M. K.A. and Rescue Team 4 were sent from Roswell AFB to investigate the crashed disc. The saucer was 50 ft. in diameter. There were 4 dead aliens scattered about the desert by the saucer. Seen at night, by light from a helicopter at 20 feet altitude, aliens height between 4 and 4.5 ft, large heads, no helmets, tight-fitting dark blue suits, faces were under copter spotlight, light green with a luminous tint. The saucer was stored in Hangar 18, later expanded to 9 stories high and 11 stories deep with heavy refrigeration equipment, radar equipment, and sophisticated computer equipment.

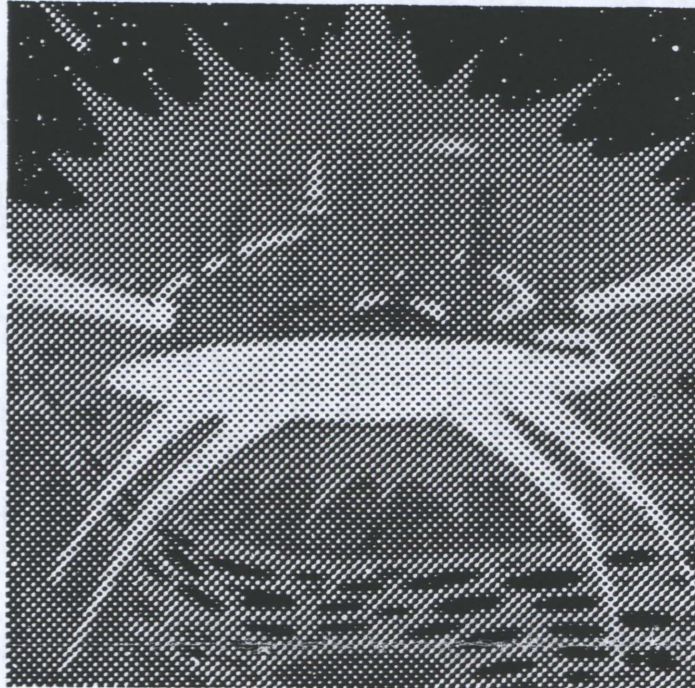

Aug. 1954 - Statement by Air Chief Marshal Lord Dowding, head of the RAF during WW2... "of course the flying saucers are real; and, they are interplanetary."

GLORIA ALDERSON

Oct. 9, 1955 - General Douglas McArthur states... "The nations of the world will have to unite, for the next war will be interplanetary war. The nations of Earth must someday make a common front against attack by HOSTILE ALIENS people from other planets."

1961-1963 - Near Nellis AFB, Nevada, "Mat" a radio maintenance engineer at Nevada's AEC between 1961-1963, provided evidence to the Mufon Journal that project REDLIGHT was secretly being conducted at nearby "Area 51" a 50-mile square quadrant of land east of Nellis AFB. This project "involved" flight-testing of a UFO, which had been shipped there from Edwards AFB. The craft flew silently, was about 30 ft. in diameter.

GLORIA ALDERSON

1965 - While visiting the Air Force Museum, Dayton, Ohio, R.M. (initials), a government employee of 23 years, went through a double door marked "OFF LIMITS" and suddenly came face-to-face with an alien with blue skin, in a self-contained space suit. Description about 4½ ft. tall and walked stiff-legged. A see-through dome over it, a large head, wasn't human, large eyes under a heavy brow, no noticeable nose, a slit for a mouth, bluish skin. When it walked, it didn't bend its knees. R.M. later found out from a retired AF Colonel from Wright-Patterson AFB, that two live aliens were held in captivity in an artificial environment. The Colonel also said that a 2-man sized craft crashed near White Water Lake, Indiana, as a result of an electrical disturbance in the atmosphere.

Oct. 1969 - Jimmy Carter sees and reports a UFO.

1972 - Project SNOWBIRD established to test fly a captured flying saucer. ????

Sept. 1973 - At Great Lakes Naval Base, Chicago... Instructor R.K. while delivering a sealed envelope to the Commandant in a quonset hut, was surprised to see a saucer 30 ft. in diameter, and 10 ft. high, resting on a wooden platform. Description: silvery blue. There were no windows. R.K. believed this saucer to be the one shot down on its 3rd pass over a Navy vessel by a missile. The saucer crashed in 350 ft of water between Hawaii and the mainland. It was retrieved by a Glamor Explorer, shipped to Hawaii then stateside to Chicago.

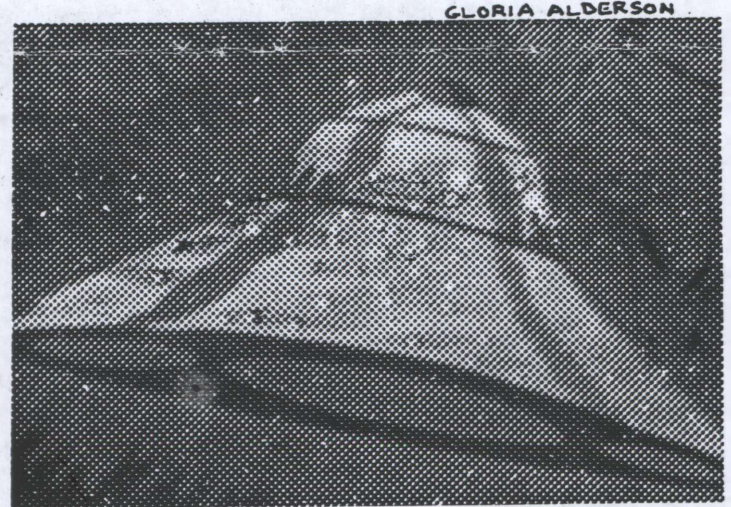

March 28, 1975 - Letter from Senator Barry Goldwater stating...Ten or twelve years ago, I tried to get access to the building at Wright-Patterson where UFO artifacts were stored and I was denied access... even though I held Top Security clearances. It is still classified TOP SECRET...and even above TOP SECRET.

April 11, 1979 - A letter to Lee M. Graham...from Senator Barry Goldwater...

Dear Mr. Graham: It is true I was denied access to a facility at Wright-Patterson. Because I never got in, I can't tell you what was inside...we both know about the rumors.

Apart from that, first let me make my position clear. I do not believe that we are the only planet, and of some two-billion that exist, that has life on it. I have never seen what I would call a UFO, but I have intelligent friends who have, so I can sort of argue either way.

Dec. 29, 1980 - A low-flying UFO was escorted by a large number of helicopters (23) Chinooks and Hueys, near Dayton, Texas. It was probably escorted to the TOP SECRET underground installation within Fort Hood, Texas. The SECRET AFB is NOT listed in the Air Force Officer, a guide or the Air Force Almanac (it is an Army AFB). The name of the secret base is GRAY AAF, Texas. The special group piloting the helicopters are known as the "BLUE BOYS". The Texas Dept. of Public Safety (State Police) works closely with Gray AAF on UFO cases.

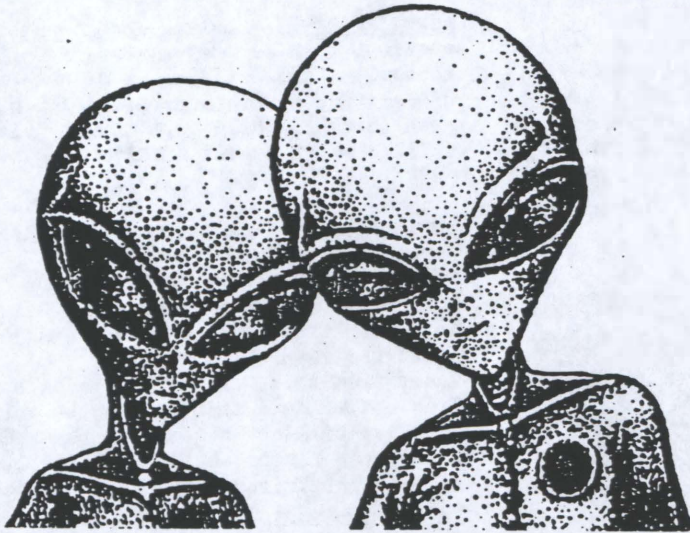

GLORIA ALDERSON

Feb. 15, 1987 - The San Jose Mercury newspaper states that the Pentagon has a Black Budget which has become a "Black Hole" for SECRET project spending! It is far bigger than the Federal budget for education or transportation or agriculture of the environment. These projects are classified above TOP SECRET, therefore very few federal investigators have the security clearance necessary to audit black programs.

The U.S. sent its first space station, Skylab, into orbit in 1973. It had three crews before it was abandoned in 1974. It fell to Earth five years later. A cow in Australia was the only fatality attributed to the tons of crash-landing debris.

ALIENOTES

According to Dr. James Annis of the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory, Illinois, the reason aliens have not got here yet is that our galaxy has only recently given space-faring life the chance to thrive. Until just a few hundred million years ago, Dr. Annis says, our galaxy was regularly being sapped by so-called gamma-ray Bursters: collisions between dead stars and black holes that release vast quantities of sterilising radiation. Only now are these collisions rare enough for alien life to emerge and travel decent distances from their home planet.

Joe Firmage, a 28-year-old multi-millionaire and co-founder of US/ Web/CMS -- one of the largest Web site consulting firms in the U.S., resigned the company to pursue "the most important news event in 2,000 years." Mr. Firmage wants to investigate something he believes has been covered up for too long -- the existence of aliens from outer space. Not only do aliens exist, he claims, they are directly responsible for most of the innovations in our society through history. Fibre optics, semi-conductors, micro-chips, lasers, and even Furby, the electronic toy, are only a few of the wonders that we have inherited from our alien benefactors, he says. Now he's decided to devote his time -- and the weight of his considerable personal fortune -- to prove it.

Richard Belser, star of the TV show, Homicide: Life on the Street, for someone as conspiracy theory-minded, has written a book called UFOs, JFK and ELVIS. He believed there is some serious stuff out there about UFOs.

In a humor column by Linwood Barclay, he looks at the Y2K crisis. In the first paragraph, a woman reader writes to say: "My husband says a secret government agency placed a computer chip in his brain several years ago during an alien abduction, and come Jan. 1, (possibly even sooner, he says), he'll no longer be able to do any household chores, like take out the trash or walk the dog. As it turns out, he's O.K. with this. Any suggestions?" Barclay: Tell him that's some coincidence, because you're an abductee yourself, and there's a whole lot of services you won't be performing as of Jan.1, either. (Toronto Star, Feb.20/99)

In San Francisco, Calif., a billboard campaign by a 24-Hour Fitness chain depicted a leering, hungry space alien and reads "When they come, they will eat the fat ones first." A group of 30 or more overweight folks chanted "Eat me!" while performing aerobatics to protest the ad campaign they said demoralised fat people. One protester waved a handwritten sign that read "Bite My Fat, Alien Butt."

The U.S. Postal Service has chosen Steven Spielberg's creation from the 1982 film E.T. THE EXTRA-TERRESTRIAL as one of 30 possibilities to be used on stamps representing the 1980s.

ALIEN VISITATIONS

According to the December, 1998 issue of VANCOUVER magazine, research showed that 31% of people believe in alien visitations. 700 residents of Greater Vancouver were interviewed on the phone by Viewpoints Research.

ARCHAEOLOGY

Fossilised primate remains have been found in a 40-million-year old rock, a discovery that could lead to a better understanding of when man first appeared in Asia, members of a Myanmar-Japanese team said last November 28, 1998. The remains of the primate, with an upper jaw and teeth intact, complement a similar find last year in the same region, Pondaung. Until these discoveries, it was believed that primates from which man evolved first appeared in Southeast Asia at a later date.

Construction workers building a toll highway between Fredericton and Moncton, New Brunswick, have found an ancient aboriginal campsite about 30 miles S.E. of Fredericton. Archaeologists at the site have uncovered several hearths and pieces of cooking pots estimated to be 1,500 to 2,000 years old. It may be part of an ancient Maliseet camping route, a seasonal stopping place where aboriginals would hunt and fish.

In Colombo, Ceylon, an Indian draftsman claims to have stumbled upon the link between the ancient Egyptian pyramids, the nine chakras, and the Star of David: Triangles. This discovery, he claims, allows him to translate a person's name into revealing triangles. He insists his line of work is not astrology. He calls his work "anthropometrics". To see samples of his work, his website is: (<http://kode.netfores&/fractals/>)

A team of British divers believes an 18th Century wreck of a ship captained by the Scottish-born American naval officer John Paul Jones sank off the eastern coast of England in 1779. The whereabouts of the wreck of the Bonhomme Richard has been shrouded in mystery for two centuries despite several previous searches.

Archaeologists in Bulgaria have excavated a 72,000-year-old settlement in the Devetashkata Cave near Plevan, 160 kilometres northeast of the capital, Sofia. The cave, one of the largest in Europe, was inhabited during six historical periods, from the Palaeolithic to the Middle Ages.

More than 1,500 human skeletons believed to date from between the fifth and 11th centuries have been exhumed at the site of a proposed service station near Dublin, Ireland.

GRIM NIGHT AT GRIMSBY BEACH

By Oscar Magocsi

These events occurred between 2330 and 0130 hours on the night of Jan. 17, and approximately the same hours on the Sunday night of Jan. 23, 1983, near Grimsby Beach, Ontario, Canada, on the southwestern shore of Lake Ontario.

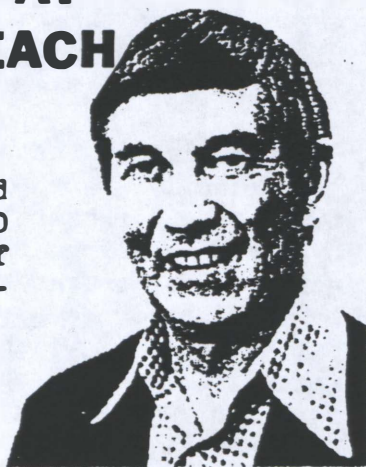

For several days before the actual meeting, especially over the preceding weekend, I had a growing hunch about an impending contact with my Space Friends.

Some nights I even had an urge to drive out to some distant point by Lake Ontario hoping to see the mysterious dance of recurring nocturnal lights over the water. Then, Monday night, Jan. 17, when my TV set went suddenly dead amid some smoke, I jumped into my car on a strong premonition and drove out of Toronto.

Following my nose, I wound up on the southwestern shore of Lake Ontario at the end of a concession road, about 5 miles east of Grimsby Beach. There, I sat for a while inside the car in the wind gusts of the damp night.

About 2330 hours, some potato chip company's white truck pulled in alongside me. Then a guy from the truck came over and rapped on my window, motioning me to go with him. I instantly recognized him even in the dim light. It was Argus, my alien space friend. I also noticed a light-toned car hanging back, its engine running but lights off.

I followed Argus right into the truck's inside, through the rear platform. The interior was laid out like a mobile communications center, packed with TV monitors, consoles, recorders and scopes of all kinds. The set-up reminded me of another converted Ground Command Center, a Winnebago mobile the Psycheans used a few years earlier.

"Periodically, we have to switch vehicles to maintain our cover," Argus explained, after greeting me warmly. "By the way, that blue car you spotted out there is run by Angela, presently on guard duty."

I took a mug of hot coffee offered by another man sitting in the shade of a partitioned front seat -- Buzz Andrews himself -- while Argus kept up the talking.

"Well, Oscar, it took quite a few days of psychic nudging to make you come out here. Even though you came later, perhaps it's better this way, in the unmolested privacy of a quiet Monday night. Weekends are usually rather hectic out here, with plenty of snoopers and 'baddies' sniffing even at UFO watchers."

"Of course, there are always some friendly types around too, at several places.

At times even personal friends of yours -- or friends of friends -- keep popping up, some of whom sense quite a lot of the comings and goings. Incidentally, we acknowledge the several requests and questions that came in from near and far to us the past months. We shall try our best responding to each appropriately, circumstances and other obligations permitting."

"Incidentally, most of these friends and associates seem to have their intuitive faculties remarkably well developed. Many of their hunches are dead on, with batting average on the increase. We can tell just through the occasional monitoring of their conversations," Argus informed me.

Then we spent about two hours discussing the progress of my writing the book on Buzz Andrews' space odyssey -- the discussion was the main purpose of our meeting. For me this was most fruitful and timely, since I had just happened to finish the first full draft a few days earlier.

I was summoned on a moment's notice to our second meeting, which occurred six nights later at the same place and under much the same circumstances in damp and uninviting weather. This time we managed to wrap up the discussions on the book's writing, then spent some time on general talk.

"We noticed the brisk activities of researchers and watchers over the weekend along the Niagara Peninsula and elsewhere in the region. Alert, not missing a thing, some even looking frequently over their shoulders," Argus remarked, without mentioning names.

BEYOND MY
IN UFOs

By Oscar Magosci

Illustrated by
Gene Duplantier

Now, several years after his UFO Odyssey, the author recounts his further contacts and latest meetings with space beings in Canada and the United States.

The author's encounter with a Psychoean apparition in his home; a chilling scene with MIBs on a Manhattan street; an underwater ride in a UFO off the coast of Key West, Florida; dark-of-night UFO rides near Munole, Indiana; and a chilly night-time rendezvous with Argus, his longtime Psychoean space friend.

Afterwards, at the closing of the meeting, Argus gave me the following timely message of some importance to be passed on to friends, associates and sympathizers.

"Many a time in the past 3-4 years, we of the friendly space powers knew about the intimidating harassments and psychic attacks by the Dark Forces on our friends, Light workers, UFO researchers, associates and sympathizers. We were often on top of the situations, yet we chose not to interfere (except in cases of grave danger) -- but rather draw the dark agents out into the open and let them lead us to their connections. In this fashion, we managed to expose and neutralize vast segments of their operational network."

"We apologize for such utilization of friends as bait, but the cleanup job had to be done. Also, some of you wished to help fighting cosmic evil. So all was not in vain. Many of you became much stronger and/or underwent much needed (and unavoidable) purification through these past trials and tribulations. And all this helps the global balance shifting towards the Light. Unfortunately, evil in its many forms and ways is still with us, in spite of rumors to the contrary. Some might say this notion about evil is just paranoia, but is it really? Take a look at happenings in the world. Do you seriously believe that all the senseless malevolence and violence, all the global and personal 'disasters' are just random or coincidental stuff?"

"These are times of trials and tribulations. The end of the era is night -- the only question is the 'when' and the 'how'. The 'end' (or the new beginning) could come any time between 1984 and 1996, but by 1999 the very latest. Beyond 1984, our Space Federation will no longer make major efforts to avert global disasters -- we will rather shift the emphasis to immediate mass evacuation of Earth's decent folks in concert with other allied Space Powers, to be ready whenever the final hour strikes."

"There will be many more dramatic happenings and strange encounters, sightings and insights, profound changes, social upheavals and natural calamities. This period will also bring long awaited answers and solutions, relief and upswings for most of our friends and sympathizers."

The COSMIC CLOCK

By John R. Frick

In the recent past, scientific concern has become forever "acute" regarding "mass extinctions" millions of years ago on planet Earth.

Many theories have been advanced which run the gamut from the Sun having a "companion star" which we have somehow overlooked, or a new planet called "X" which could be the culprit, yet since it lurks in the shadows beyond Pluto, we really don't know that it exists.

Then too, there is the speculation regarding the "Oort cloud", that our "Nemesis planet" or the "Death Star" excites or jostles hundreds of comets within this cloud, sending them careening towards our sun and this planetary system; that this could be responsible for the massive destructions and the extinction of civilizations every 26-million years or so, is suggested.

While differing "hypotheses" have been offered by many scientists producing some insights into this situation, it appears that the scientific community is wallowing in a trench of "self-indulgence", and the mute question is, just how long can this type of reasoning continue??

For after all, "Man's" life span here on Earth limits the amount of time that he can continue with such conjecture.

That the universe is vast, and that the celestial bodies are so innumerable, and that we do have an accumulation of facts which science can work from; and since the "time element" does leave a lot to be desired -- let us try a very different tangent that might produce a more plausible solution regarding planet Earth's survival, giving us additional insights into the "cosmic forces" which have controlled the universe from the beginning of time.

Since the "cosmic clock" implies a vehicle of destruction, could it be that of a natural "planetary function", the magnitude of which would involve the "shifting of our axis" and the eventual "shifting of the poles"??

For science has never come to grips with any solution that would explain these two actions, yet all will agree that such cataclysms do occur, and with more regularity than they would like to admit. With this different perspective, could these occurrences be "built-in failsafes", designed to extend the "longevity" of a planet, forestalling a total destruction??

And, as the "time element" strongly suggests an impending cataclysmic event, such as the "Eulerian Circle" which is circumscribing a 429 day path, and that science seems oblivious to this "barometer of balance" wherein is scientific logic??

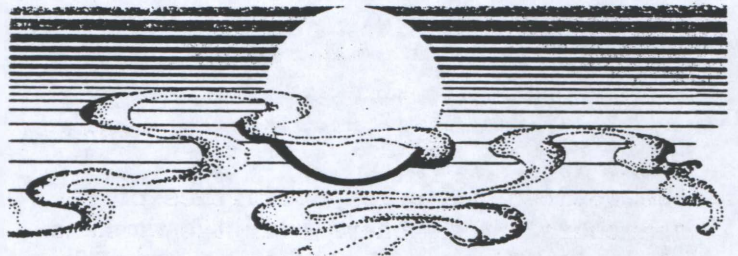

Since logic is "truth in fact", let us approach this age old scientific wonderment by using a very different guideline, very simply, "the nature of things"...

In this analytical process, "planetary characteristics" become a very important factor. Following this trend of thought, we could say that all planets are created in the same manner. The birth of a planet first involves the formation of the "solid nucleus" which is rotating in the minus gravity scale, and is therefore invisible to the human eye. And in these first stages of formation this nucleus is in the process of attracting the necessary constituents primarily by magnetics, which will form the magma area and designate the expanding "crustal" regions.

As this occurs there is an adjustment in "axial velocity" by the inner sphere which is rotating in a counter clockwise motion, producing what is known as the "counter-force of gravity", and in conjunction with the rotation of the exterior crustal formation, does establish "natural gravity".

This "counter-force of gravity" is responsible for the "holding position" of all planets, and of course has nothing to do with the orbital path which is sustained by magnetics between the sun and Earth. Now in an effort to maintain a perspective with which you can correlate, imagine the tiny nubbin of an orange just under the blossom.

It's hardly bigger than 1/16th of an inch in size, yet this formation contains all its divisions, a specific number of seeds, and the ability to increase its liquid content as its growth dictates, and it expands to hundreds of times its original size within a certain time frame; likewise, in a similar manner can we imagine the growth of the planets. We could say that all planets follow the same pattern of growth.

In the beginning of the second stage of formation, the exterior crust has been formed at a specific distance around the inner sphere; the pressures and the magnetics maintaining the proper distance.

The pressures which have been generated, and the gaseous content have created a "bubble or layer" which has conformed to the bottom of the crust. As the crustal expansion process continues this gaseous layer becomes entrapped and becomes evenly divided as the crust forces its way through the layer creating the divisions.

These divisions will later be designated as "cavern walls" and their thickness is estimated at approximately one half mile. The expansion of the crust positions these "bubbles" within the top, or the first fifty miles of the Earth's surface.

Subsequently the gas dissipates in some manner in a period of time leaving huge caverns almost identical in size, large enough to hold an entire civilization.

The remaining expansion process over eons of time, does establish a uniform crust approximately 800 miles in thickness.

These caverns which were described were discovered by William L. Brian, II, Master of Science, Oregon State University, and so outlined in his book, MOONGATE.

Since the nature of things produces like situations, I have concluded this to be a "planetary characteristic" of all planets, this regardless of size.

While the time process dictates the thickness, also forming within this crust are huge "tubes" which rise through the crust to the Earth's surface.

It is estimated that the first fifty miles of Earth's surface is constructed in "strata layers". These layers become larger in width the deeper the measurements. Below this distance of 50 miles, the lower mantle becomes harder and harder, ten times the strength of steel or iron.

Also to be noted, without establishing "natural gravity" in the beginning of the second stage, the planet couldn't function properly and the "building process" could be non-existent.

Einstein and Velikovsky both agreed "that centrifugal force and gravity were inseparable".

In reality centrifugal force is then the lower stages of gravity.

From this explanation one can conclude that "all planets" sustain "natural gravity", also they have "solid crusts".

Scientific conjecture that gravity differs from planet to planet is totally unacceptable, for recent evidence has proven that the Moon's gravity is the same as Earth.

Scientific concepts of "gravity" are ill-defined and will not support the mathematics involved.

Returning to the growth of a planet, the "liquid magma" is supplied in two ways, the heat creates a "condensate factor" and also the crust "weeps" into the tube system, supplying liquids during the "cooling process."

The interchange to steam does assist as the pressure mount propelling the "magma" through the tubular system to the Earth's surface.

The "inner sphere" or "core" does operate with increased and decreasing atmospheric pressures involved, for if this cavern was completely sealed the force necessary to project the magma to the surface would be sufficient to "blow the Earth apart".

The inner sphere maintains an exact center position within this cavern controlled by electro-magnetic suspension.

And, as the Earth's crust is in a counter rotation to this inner sphere this accelerates the "coating process" of the underside of the crust.

The liquid magma never touches the inner sphere. After a certain maturity a given number of the tubes cease to function, but the "mixing vat" functions for the life of the planet supplying additional material to the volcanoes assisting in "planetary balance."

As with all things in nature, there are "mutations" and "overgrowths" and such is the manner of the planets.

Orbiting Mars, Phobos and Deimos could be an example of the mutations. Also Jupiter could be an example of the overgrowth.

Another piece of positive information, the television exposure of Halley's Comet did show "craters" upon what would be considered the top of this "piece of a planet", which indicates the comet's origin.

It further indicates that planets are destroyed by different means which involve "internal explosions".

In using the guidelines of "the nature of things" I feel the "Cosmic Clock" becomes easier to define and locate.

And instead of research through periods of antiquity, we would be wise to concentrate upon for recent times.

And, as Immanuel Velikovsky indicated in his book "Earth and Upheavals", a definition, the accuracy of which was truly amazing, "Sudden the agent must have been, and violent; recurrent it must have been, but at highly erratic intervals; and it must have been of titanic power" -- gentlemen of Science the "Cosmic Clock" is "geological" in origin and I submit that I have placed it well within your view, and by virtue of "the nature of things" you will recognize the "weakness" as a "failsafe" dynamic of planet Earth and all planets. The functions of the "counter-force of gravity" are hereby outlined for those with greater interest.

The Earth's inner sphere is designated the "counter-force of gravity", and its rotation is counter clock-wise to the exterior surface of Earth.

When and if the exterior crust of Earth slows its axial rotation, whether it concerns an axis shift, a comet striking it, or any other reason which could be proposed; slowly the inner sphere will automatically adjust compensating for the "slow down", and when the adjustment is complete natural gravity will have been re-established.

This is a character of all planets, and it will explain the many different rotational periods of all planets within our planetary system.

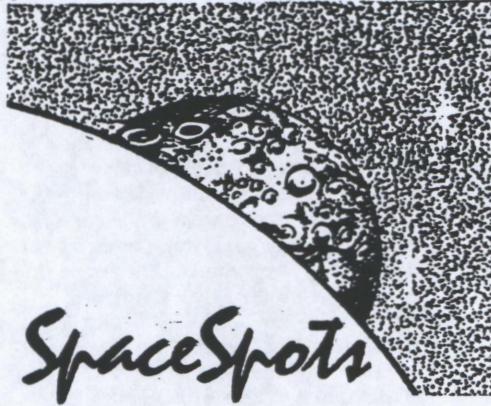

It will further explain why the formula of gravity cannot be applied to the surface rotation of any planet, for it appears they are in constant adjustment, and therefore the "counter-force of gravity" must be taken into consideration, the differential being an easy equation.

This information will no doubt change drastically scientific concepts of the functioning of all planets, regardless of their size, and will give them additional insights into plain "planetary geology"; and it should stabilize their mathematical concepts of "gravity".

MASSIVE ASTEROID WILL COME CLOSE TO EARTH IN 2027

A kilometre-wide asteroid looks as if it will come close to our planet in about 28 years. It will be a visible reminder that space can be a dangerous place. After computing a new path for the rock, scientists and other astronomers determined it will come close to Earth on Aug. 7, 2027. It may swing as close as 30,000 kilometres. That's 1/12th the distance between here and moon. (Cr: Knight Ridder)

Norwegian scientists have discovered a rare undersea meteor crater in the Arctic left by a collision millions of years ago. The 40-kilometre-wide crater was found 200 km. north of Norway on the ocean floor. Seven such sub-sea craters are known to exist, compared with more than 150 on land. Its impact caused a tidal wave that stretched from Canada to Russia, and it sent a plume of hot debris into the atmosphere that darkened much of the planet. Grater samples showed traces of iridium, a rare element more often found in space than on Earth.

A $128-million (U.S.) Stardust spacecraft is on a mission to bring back dust from a comet 3.7 million kilometres away. It's the first attempt to bring back to Earth solid extraterrestrial material from beyond our solar system. It is scheduled to rendezvous on Jan. 2, 2004, with a medium-sized comet named Wild-2. The probe is equipped with a tennis racquet-shaped device which will unfurl to collect tiny comet particles. The probe is expected to return to Earth on Jan. 15, 2006. If all goes well, a recovery team will follow a radio beacon to retrieve the samples.

Somewhere, in a star system perhaps not so far away, lies a "pale blue dot" that could be a planet much like Earth.

Astronomers, astrobiologists and chemists plotting the search for that planet met recently at a NASA research centre in California, co-ordinating new research and technologies aimed at scouring the skies for alien worlds that could support life.

Recent progress in detection of planets fuel expectations that perhaps planetary systems are really quite common in the universe, biogeochemist, David Des Marais, said.

The search will get a big boost when the planned deployment of a massive new telescope, dubbed the Terrestrial Planet Finder, could be operating by 2010. This huge orbiting telescope should be able to provide images some 100 times clearer than those from the Hubble Space Telescope and will also provide spectroscopic analysis of distant planetary atmospheres, and offer key signs of potential human-like life.

Take some chemicals, stir in a source of energy and mix with mild temperatures for a few hundred million years and you have a recipe for life, researchers believe. They say that life may be commonplace beyond the Earth. In this solar system alone, there are at least four places besides Earth where life could have evolved. Beyond the sun, untold numbers of stars could be shining on planets teeming with life of some sort. The four places other than Earth that might harbor life are: Jupiter, Mars, Ganymede and on Venus, now a torrid planet but a place that once had more pleasant temperatures.

The Mars Global Surveyor has found the first evidence that lava solidified into giant plates long ago on the red planet and that sand dunes were blowing around as recently as last summer.

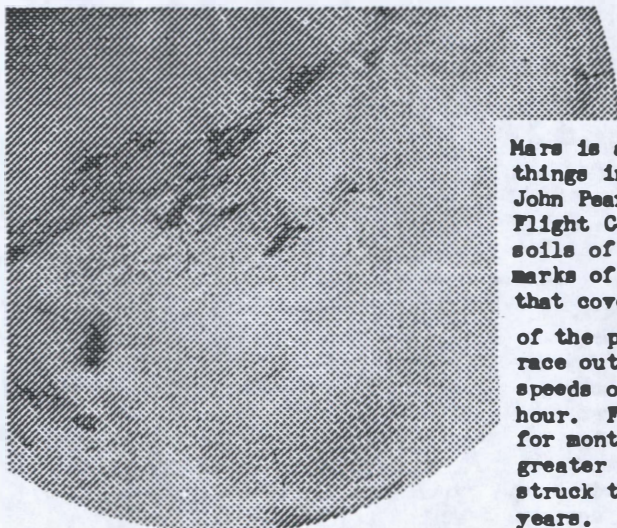

For the first time, an astronomer has sighted and photographed what may be a planet outside our solar system, a finding that could advance the search for another Earthlike world that may support life.

A huge gamma-ray energy burst, 9-billion years old, was watched "live" by astronomers and scientists on Jan. 23, 1999. It came from the far reaches of the universe, sending light, X-rays and radio waves two-thirds of the way across the universe.

It was probably caused by the birth of a black hole, or by the collision of two massive stars known as neutron stars. "The object would be so bright that for 100 seconds it was on, it outshone the whole universe, which to me is an amazing concept," said Shrinivas Kulkarni, an astronomer at Caltech.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration's new Astrobiology Institute -- a "virtual" institute linking 11 different labs via the Internet -- has come up with its official road map for the search for life. The map shows a convoluted course that winds its way through super-hot undersea vents, deep into the frozen Antarctic, and through oceans, before shooting off towards Mars and Europa, one of Jupiter's moons, and beyond. They will try to determine under what conditions life can survive and thrive, whether these conditions do or ever did exist elsewhere in the solar system, and whether Earthlings can make it out there in space.

Mars is a small planet that does things in a very big way, says John Pearl of Goddard Space Flight Center. Red rocks and soils of Mars are imprinted with marks of high-speed wind storms that cover virtually a whole side of the planet, and of waters that race out of dammed-up craters at speeds of more than 100 miles per hour. Floods could have lasted for months, and was 1,000 times greater than floods that have struck the U.S. Midwest in recent years.

On April 20, 1967, the Surveyor-3 spacecraft landed on the Moon, bringing with it the first creature from Earth -- Streptococcus mitis. When Surveyor-3 was being prepared for launch, someone apparently coughed on it, and a colony of the harmless and common bacteria stuck on a piece of foam insulation covering a circuit board. The bacteria had been freeze-dried in space, but were quickly revived once back on Earth. The contamination accident revealed that bacteria could survive a launch, travel unprotected through the vacuum of space, and survive three years on the Moon's surface -- a place of high radiation, temperatures near absolute zero, and no nutrients. Once dropped into a nutrient-rich petri dish back on Earth, the bacteria came out of "hibernation" and back to life.

Canadian scientists will soon unveil their new multi-million-dollar telescope called Gemini North, on Hawaii's Mount Mauna Kea. The Gemini team predicts it will produce the clearest, sharpest images of the heavens, reveal the existence of many new planets, and disclose the birth of stars and solar systems. It is expected to also alter radically our understanding of everything from black holes to the formation of galaxies. The Gemini is expected to compete in terms of quality with the Hubble space telescope, perhaps being able to have images as sharp or even sharper. The Gemini North scope is also the first one to employ a new optical technique that straightens out starlight, which bends when it hits Earth's atmosphere. This will stop stars from twinkling due to the effects of distortion in the atmosphere. (Cr: Margaret Munro, National Post, Associated Press, Feb. 11, 1999)

Astronomers have spent decades listening to the heavens on powerful radio telescopes, waiting for signs that we are not alone. Now SETI researchers in California have developed an innovative scheme to yoke together thousands of idle home computers and turn them into a virtual supercomputer to intensify the hunt. Their tool is a screen saver. The screen saver plucks raw data off the Internet from SETI radio telescopes and combs it for signs of E.T. phoning home. The software will be available free by April on the Internet. Data will be collected by a 300-metre-wide Arecibo radio telescope in Puerto Rico. The equipment will listen to 168 million frequencies simultaneously and sweep the entire sky every three to six months.

One of the most famous stars in the southern night sky has suddenly doubled in brightness, puzzling astronomers who suspect the star may be undergoing a massive eruption, much as it did in the 1840s. Astronomers in the Southern Hemisphere have noticed that ETA CARINAE is becoming brighter and its energy output has doubled or tripled in the last 18 months. What's puzzling is that the star wasn't supposed to do this. The star, about 7,500 light years from Earth, is among the most massive and energetic in the known universe, 100 times larger than the Sun. ETA CARINAE's future may hold more surprises. Sometimes within 10,000 years, it is expected to collapse and explode.

Astronomers have detected a small galaxy 12.3 billion light-years from Earth -- the most distant object ever seen -- and say they are on the brink of seeing things even farther away and closer to the big bang beginning of the universe. Most astronomers say the big bang was about 13 billion years ago.

Astronomers using the Hubble Space Telescope have peered 13 billion years back into time, almost to the dawn of creation, to find the oldest, most distant object ever detected -- a galaxy fizzing with stars that were new when the light was emitted from the galaxy. It lies near the edge of the universe, 13 billion light-years from Earth, where its presence was detected by its faint ultra-violet light. By some estimates, researchers are seeing the galaxy as it existed only 1 billion years after the Big Bang, the colossal explosion believed to have created the universe. The discovery by researchers at the State University of New York at Stony Brook is reported in the April 1999 issue of NATURE. (Cr: Howard Kaufman, Daily News, LA, April 15, 1999)

Astronomers have discovered a strange sputtering and pulsing object in the center of the Milky Way galaxy that appears to be a completely new species of stellar object.

Astronomers are particularly excited by the new object because nothing like it was predicted by currently accepted theories of stellar evolution. The object appears to be a strange hybrid of several types of previously detected -- but little understood -- exotic stars. Adding to the mystery is that the rhythm of the object's signals have changed substantially since December '96.

In 1833, more than 200,000 shooting stars blazed across the sky over the eastern portion of North America, prompting many to believe the world was coming to an end. The incident precipitated a new field of scientific study in the phenomenon of meteor showers.

Scientists have found a piece of meteorite many believe killed the dinosaurs. The small piece of rock was discovered during an international drilling mission to recover samples from beneath the floor of the Pacific. It is only 2.5 millimeters in size, but a detailed chemical analysis indicates it is typical of a type of meteorite called a carbonaceous chondrite. This suggests that the body that devastated Earth 65 million years ago was an asteroid 10km across.

Do we have a second sun?

By Henry Rasmusen

We definitely DO have TWO SUNS, according to M.F. Malin, of Salt Lake City, who has spent much of his spare time for over forty years in pursuit of such a theory.

The possibility of the existence of a double sun in our solar system began for Malin in 1917, when he overheard a conversation between two men, evidently scientists, on a train in New Jersey. The subject of their conversation was the failure of gravitation with respect to the relations of Earth and Sun -- their conclusion being that the basis of velocities of bodies in space must be otherwise than that laid down in Newton's PRINCIPIA. Malin was studying sculpture at the time at the National Academy of Design in New York. This failure of the gravitational law was shocking to him, for even he knew that Newton's mathematical demonstrations in this connection had formed the groundwork of the whole of modern mechanics, engineering and physics.

How could the law have failed, when the result of this work were already interwoven throughout the whole structure of science in all its branches? The modern researches of Einstein and others were always said to have enhanced the value of the PRINCIPIA. The matter attracted the young sculptor so greatly that from that time he began to divide his attention about equally between sculpture and astrophysical study, often working far into the night in efforts to improve his meager knowledge of mathematics, and spending his available time poring over astronomical and astrophysical works in the libraries. Quite early in these studies, he found that although Newton had proven his law very successfully in connection with the Earth-Moon system, he had been forced to abandon his efforts to apply it to the relations of Earth and Sun because the sun's distances and dimensions were not known with any degree of accuracy in his time.

A couple of centuries later (after 1894), when the sun's distance and size had been agreed upon and established internationally, the apparent discrepancies in the gravitational relations of Earth and Sun had become painfully evident.

Using the Sun as a CENTER OF ATTRACTION, with the Earth-Moon system as a unit of measurement, the proper elements of the Earth's orbit were readily calculable, but everywhere seemed to be awry.

The Earth's distance, period and velocity were hopelessly at variance with each other according to the gravitation law, but the distance and period had been established by observation and could not be adjusted. Also, the Sun's size in connection with these elements presented an awkward problem.

After many a headache over the situation, the calculators of the day had given up, and had conceded that the basis of velocities in Nature must be other than in Newton's work and had offered the poor parody of gravitational relations on the part of Sun and Earth which is current in the astronomy books of today. This was even more intriguing than ever, because it was perfectly clear that this basis of velocities -- that is, the amount of material in the body divided by the square of the distance of the attracted particle -- literally IS THE LAW OF GRAVITATION, and that upon this point the Newtonian law as a whole must stand or fall.

Here was something which could not be thrust aside by denial or contradictions, it was something no mathematician could deny. What could be wrong? And why had the failure seemed to apply ONLY to the relations of Earth and Sun?

Malin made some simple calculations which showed the THE SUN HAS LESS THAN ONE-THIRD THE VOLUME OF MATERIAL REQUISITE TO ITS EXISTENCE AS THE CENTRAL ATTRACTION OF THE PLANETARY SYSTEM, even if its average density were the same as that of the Earth. And if its density were only about one-fourth as great as that of the Earth -- as the astronomer USUALLY RECKONS -- the discrepancy would be all the more hopeless.

How could a discordancy of such proportions ever have been glossed over for the public in the astronomy books? People in general, even among the scientists, seemed entirely unaware that the sun-centered theory and the law of gravitation WERE IRRECONCILABLE. No doubt some of the mathematicians knew but could not face the issue, not knowing anything that could be done about it. And WHERE WAS THE REMAINDER OF THE PLANETARY SYSTEM?

There seemed to be only one possible place in the system. For a body larger than the sun in volume, or the equivalent with unequal densities -- a position PERPETUALLY IN ALIGNMENT BEHIND THE SUN AS SEEN FROM THE EARTH, incredible as this might seem at first glance. And if there were a relationship between mass and brightness among stars, perhaps THE GREATER STAR WOULD BE BRIGHTER AND HOTTER THAN THE SUN, and there should be some physical signs of its presence.

If such a body existed, the planetary system would revolve around a center of gravity SITUATED BETWEEN THE TWO, SOME DISTANCE BEYOND THE SUN. It was not very difficult to calculate the proper radius of Earth's orbit by Newton's methods, and this turned out to be 101,300,000 miles -- placing the possible center of gravity of the system about 4,800,000 miles BEYOND THE SUN.

Later, Malin wrote an imaginative account of the physical appearances which might be expected if there were a brighter and hotter star operating at comparatively close range BEHIND THE SUN, and made drawings to illustrate the writing.

Of course, he already supposed that the solar corona and the zodiacal lights were involved. He went deeper into the findings of observation in the reality and compared the real phenomena with his drawings searching the periodicals and books for new observations, new findings, new information.

As the years passed, it became more and more clear that the imaginative phenomena were all present in the planetary system but formed a bewildering chain of scientific mysteries on the strictly sun-centered plan of Copernicus.

The scientific situation could all be summed up in the word of the eminent astronomer Simon Newcomb.

"The amazing fact that observation has opened up mainly mysteries in the Sun; that as a result the world is farther than ever from a satisfactory solution to solar phenomena."

Malin had grown up in the Mormon faith, in fact had spent two years as a missionary in New Zealand before he was twenty. Something which might have helped him substantiate the double sun theory in his own mind is to be found in one of the basic books of Mormon -- THE PEARL OF GREAT PRICE.

The book is mainly a compilation of material which the Mormon founder-prophet, Joseph Smith had translated into English from a scroll of Egyptian papyrus brought to him by a stranger in the 1820s. Among other things in the translation was a group of hieroglyphics, showing humans, birds and symbolical figures. One of these symbols Smith interpreted as being "a planet called Kolob, which is directly BEHIND THE SUN."

Whether or not this had any influence on Malin's thinking, it is an interesting parallel.

In 1931 a booklet, SOLAR ARRANGEMENT, was distributed to the world's major observatories. It contained drawings which portrayed the Zodiacal body with its light and heat AS A SEPARATE ENTITY BEHIND THE SUN from the Earth, with all the sun's major "mysteries" DRAWN IN AS NORMAL PHENOMENA.

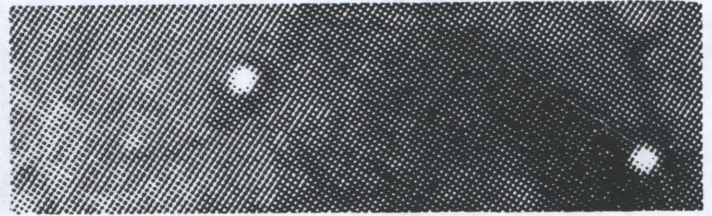

The light had long been so much a mystery that very little had ever been written about it in the astronomy books. Within a year, several new spectra appeared from various scientific sources, all of them showing the Zodiacal light TO HAVE AN EMISSION SPECTRUM OF ITS OWN, APART FROM THOSE OF THE SUN, the corona and the aurora.

(Vanguard note...a critical point in this paper, the fact that there were DIFFERENT EMISSION SPECTRA from readings taken from the rim and those taken from the interior surface of the disk.)

Malin's drawings and text represented the solar corona as being intensely hot in the space AROUND THE EDGE OF THE SUN'S VISIBLE DISK -- being the gaseous product of TERRIFIC RADIATION poured out upon the Sun's body at comparatively close range FROM A PLACE BEHIND IT.

In the years that have followed, the sun, with a measured facial temperature of about 6,000 degrees

Centigrade, has been found to be SITTING IN THE MIST OF ATOMIC CORONAL TEMPERATURES OF A MILLION DEGREES AND MORE.

Incidentally, this leaves the scientists to suppose that they are looking through a million degrees of temperature IN FRONT OF THE SUN when measuring 6,000 degrees Centigrade ON THE SOLAR SURFACE, if they adhere to the SUN-CENTERED IDEA.

It may be added, that in their researches of today the physicists USUALLY DISTINGUISH between the Zodiacal light area of the SOLAR CORONA (light and radiation radiating from the circumference of the disk) and the SOLAR AREA (across the diameter of the disk.) Why would they have to distinguish between the two readings if it is A SINGLE BODY?

Some college professors have found the yearly period on the part of the binary to be impossible, but this is because they have started out by ASSUMING THE SUN TO BE SELF-SUFFICIENT with every other body SUPERFLUOUS.

As matters stand, the astronomers and physicists have only to acknowledge that the conditions on and in front of the visible solar disk ARE ENTIRELY DIFFERENT from those found in the violent upheaval and gaseous turmoil AROUND ITS "EDGES," and then THE REST WILL FOLLOW as a matter of course, and soon the strictly sun-centered theory will be as obsolete as the epicycles of the Earth-centered era. Then our solar system will be acknowledged to have a double sun, WHICH IS THE RULE, NOT THE EXCEPTION in the universe.

Llewellyn's 2000 Crop Circle Calendar

Messages for the Millennium

Crop circles are just such an enigma. A worldwide phenomenon, an estimated 10,000 crop circle formations have been recorded in the last two decades alone. These are places of magic and mystery, where electromagnetic fields are intensified, human visitors experience physical changes, and plant life is genetically altered. Are these remarkable patterns the marks of alien spacecraft or man-made hoaxes? Do they reveal the use of high-tech government weaponry? Or are they, perhaps, messages rising from the Earth itself? This calendar is filled with beautifully striking photographs and articles by today's leading crop circle researchers, theorists, authors and skeptics. $12.95 US - $18.50 CAN. UFOs OVER TOPANGA CANYON

By Preston Dennett.

For more than 59 years strange things have occurred in the sky over Topanga Canyon, California. A new wave began on June 14, 1992. You'll read about face-to-face alien encounters, strange animal sightings, missing-time abduction cases, metallic craft and unexplained lights. You could pretend you are Fox Mulder of the X-Files TV program when you read this book. It's mind-bending and scary, maybe you'll find it hard to sleep at night but if you want adventure into the unknown, the author certainly gives it to you. The big thing here, it has all happened, not just imagination on the parts of the witnesses. 300 pages

THE ULTIMATE AGENDA By James L. Walden. The back cover of this book tells the contents to a "T". One night, teacher, counselor and public servant Jim Walden was startled by a red-eyed alien creature at the foot of his bed. He was abducted and subjected to humiliating and painful scientific procedures in a mysterious underground lab. Frightened and on the brink of suicide, he sought the help of a renowned alien-abduction researcher. Under hypnotic regression, Jim learned that he was an alien-human "hybrid." Jim shares his experiences, discoveries, and his astounding conclusions: aliens may not be gruesome creatures bent on destroying the human race. Rather, they may be our own ancestors, once revered by ancient human civilizations as reptilian gods. Now they are simply extensions of the human family, and they live in an alternate dimension here on Earth, working to preserve the planet. Find out what happened to Jim Walden and discover the most profound truth of all -- we might not be who we think we are...

OUT OF TIME AND PLACE is a compilation of 35 original articles from FATE magazine covering many mysteries of history, archaeology and the paranormal. You'll read about Mystery Falls From the Sky, A Pulsing Honeycomb from Space, Giants in the Earth, Lost City of the Pacific, Voyage to Atlantis, Ancient Astronauts, UFOs, to name a few of these fascinating tales. A number are written by wellknown writers such as Ivan T. Sanderson, Philip J. Imbrogno, L. Sprague de Camp, Harold T. Wilkins and Charles Hapgood, so you know you are in good company. 270 pages. Illus. US$9.95 - CDN$14.50

NIGHT SIEGE: The Hudson Valley UFO Sightings This, the second edition, has been expanded and revised. It's all about the mystery sightings of UFOs in the 1980s in the Hudson Valley and has been updated to cover the latest sightings and close encounters -- 7,000 reported between 1982-1995. People from all walks of life report what they witnessed -- a massive object cruising over their property. You'll read the real story by Bob Pratt, Philip Imbrogno and J. Allen Hynek. 8 pages of photos. 263 pages.
US$9.95 - CDN$13.95

Another new book recently published is FULL MOON. It is a voyage to the MOON and back: a breathtaking, mysterious elegant sequence of 145 photographs -- most of them never before published -- selected by Michael Light from 32,000 taken by the Apollo astronauts and arranged to show a composite voyage. More moving than any special effects simulation we have seen -- a revelation of space travel in all its audacious splendor. (The above description is taken from the newspaper ad in the National Post, June 12/99) Random House of Canada. Your local bookstore can probably obtain a copy for you.

UFOs, JFK AND ELVIS: Conspiracy Theories You Don't Have to be Crazy to Believe -- is a book written by Richard Belser, otherwise known as Detective Munch on the TV series "Homicide: Life On The Street." Belser intends to make a movie out of his book. He discusses among many things -- alien structures on Mars?, Faked Moon landings?. Although Belser is a comedian, the book is really about something. The second half of the book is given to testimony from UFO experts who believe UFOs are real. Belser says, "There are pilots, radar operators, scientists and military people who have seen some very strange things but they dare not talk about it because of ridicule or dismissal or arrest."

THE MESSAGES TO EARTHIAN - by Kuzou Itou is another softcover book received here and I've got some good news and bad news concerning it. First, the good news -- it's all about many subjects we've read or heard about at one time or another -- flashlight phenomena on the Moon, truth about Venus, the Sun, and the spacepeople, spaceship metals, magnetic motors, George Adamski, memories of former lives, people on other planets, to name a few subjects from the eight chapters. The bad news is that it is written in Japanese. Anyone for a crash course in Japanese? No price given (?) but you can write the author at 8 ban, 8 gou Kawasoe 7jo 4 chome, Minamiko Sapporo-shi, Hokkaido, 7005-0807 Japan.

HOLLOW PLANETS

A new book titled HOLLOW PLANETS has been written and published by Jan Lamprecht. It is over 560 pages long, has 33 plates and 100 diagrams, graphs and maps. Those that have seen it are raving about it, including Mark Harp, an old hollow earth researcher.

It can be ordered on the Internet at WWW.HollowPlanets.com. You can also order it by sending a cheque to: World Wide Magazine Review, P.O. Box 49625, Austin, TX, U.S.A. Price is US$ 32.95

They look like bales of hay or giant marshmallows covered in white plastic -- except they're soft, wet, and cold. They're called snowrollers. They appeared on the outskirts of St. John's, Newfoundland, on a 20-hectare farm covered in hundreds of fluffy snowrollers. The weather phenomenon is very unusual and needs a certain temperature and wind condition. (Cr: Marina Jimenez, National Post, Feb. 13, 1999)

Crazy ants are eating the crabs on Christmas Island in the Indian Ocean. So far, 3-million crabs have been killed in the past 1 1/2 years. They dig into the crabs' burrows, kill them, and eat them. They're called CRASY ants because of their frenetic movements. West African traders are probably to blame when they landed there about 50 years ago.

A prison inmate recently filed a $6.6-million (US) lawsuit against himself after he violated his own "civil rights" by getting arrested. He asked the state of California to pay because he had no income in jail. His suit was dismissed as frivolous.

On Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1999, a large area of Los Angeles County was officially declared colonized by the Africanized killer honeybees. Each colony can be home to 50,000 bees.

Weird World

A mystery animal has attacked 13 people -- including 5 children -- in Cairo, Egypt, before escaping back into the desert. The animal, which has been seen periodically since 1996, is described as being bigger than a dog, with beige fur, fangs, a long muzzle and a tail like a wolf's. Scientists are divided over whether it is a hyena, or a member of the dog family, but ordinary people have named it the SALAWA. In 1996, SALAWAS killed at least four people in Cairo and Upper Egypt and injured dozens of others. (Cr: National Post, June 21, 1999)

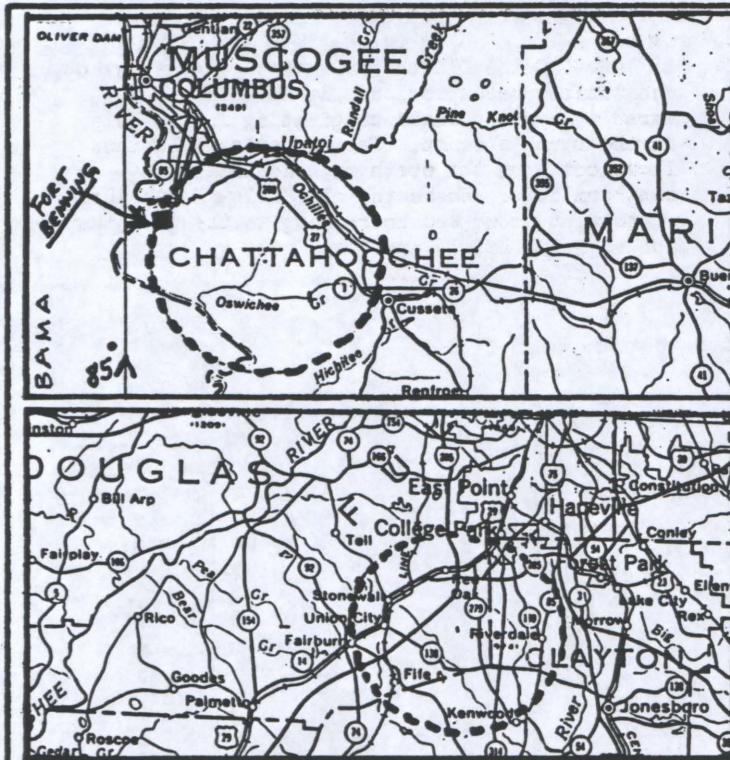

A cat burglar, copying Spiderman, the comic book hero, climbed seven-stories on the outside of a Vancouver, B.C., condominium complex, and burgled six apartments. He got into them through open or unlocked patio doors. This happened on the weekend of April 3, 1999. A rash of similar robberies occurred in 1997.

A camel, wandering on a Saudi Arabia highway, was struck and injured by a car, then the camel got in front of a second vehicle which swerved into an oncoming car, killing five occupants.

A surfer who sued another for taking a wave "intended for him" had his case dismissed by the jury because they were unable to put a price on the "pain and suffering" the surfer endured by watching someone "scoop" his wave.

A California student is suing his university after falling from his dormitory window when he dropped his pants, hung out the window, and "mooned" passers by. He claimed the college should have warned him of the dangers of living on the fourth floor.

A shower of "blue rain" alarmed residents of Peruggoria, Argentina, in September of 1998. It was found to have been caused by ash from forest fires in Bolivia and Brazil.

Alien/UFO Underground Bases?

Recently, a special TECHNIQUE has been developed to locate the sites of deep underground ALIEN/UFO bases in the U.S.A..

Two such facilities are being researched in the state of GEORGIA. Both underground installations are similar to the GROOM LAKE site in Nevada. A "collusion factor" may exist at these two locations, with certain individuals at Fort Benning and Stone Mountain, Georgia possibly having direct knowledge of activities progressing inside of these ALIEN/UFO bases. Data leads are being researched.

The dotted circles on the two map sections indicate the locations of the ALIEN/UFO sites.

The Chandler Wobble

By Jan Lamprecht

Lately I've been pondering the Chandler Wobble. The exact significance of the Chandler Wobble is possibly something I should write about.

In a nutshell, the Earth -- every place on the face of the Earth, moves up and down relative to the stars over a 14-month period. This is proven fact by virtue of thousands of astronomical sightings.

Interestingly, Chandler was NOT A SCIENTIST. He simply took the sightings of astronomers, did a mathematical study and proved that the entire surface of the Earth wobbles up and down over a strict period of 14 months, and no one knows why.

In fact, scientists pretty much hated him for doing it as well. He was not popular. But it's been accepted as fact for over 80 years.

What IS interesting is that the Chandler Wobble should NOT be. The Chandler Wobble, if the Earth's structure is that which geophysicists speculate -- the wobble will dampen out in 23 years. But it doesn't. The documentary evidence shows that the Chandler Wobble has been around for the last 200 years for which we have data.

The Chandler Wobble is related to the Earth's north pole. The Chandler Wobble also seems to be excited in PART by EARTHQUAKES. The Chandler Wobble shows that the entire Earth's surface moves (by different amounts). The wobble seems to me to be directly related to the possibility of a FUTURE POLE SHIFT. The correlation between this wobble and earthquakes is fascinating. But the wobble also implies that the Earth is non-rigid -- that's the part scientists hate.

There is good evidence of a thing on Mercury called the "irregular terminator". What it amounts to is that Mercury's entire crust rises and falls by ENORMOUS amounts. I use this to support the idea of a Hollow Shell rising and falling under conditions of stress. Then I want to turn around and say the Chandler Wobble is evidence of a similar phenomenon on Earth -- but the Earth's crust being thicker than Mercury's is not as flexible. Also, Mercury is closer to the Sun, and perhaps the Sun's tidal effect is causing tremendous deformities in Mercury's crust -- whereas the Earth has no similar force acting on it.

There is one phenomenon on Venus, a VERY COMMON anomaly -- which is known to all astronomers and which occurs at EVERY OPPOSITION WITHOUT FAIL. Venus looks like a crescent -- from Earth. The calculations which show when it should present a 1/2 moon shape, are ALWAYS out. To this day.

It doesn't seem to be related though, to Venus's position in ORBIT. That would be the logical conclusion -- but Venus behaves in orbit exactly as it should.

I propose a theory to account for this dichotomy of Venus problem. As far as I am aware, no one has 'EVER' been able to even venture a guess as to what this bizarre phenomenon could be. I want to propose that Venus's crust/atmosphere is rising and falling and that causes the dichotomy problem.

To give you a basic idea of how common these anomalies are, read any book on the planets and you will see it mention TWO extremely common and scientifically acknowledged puzzles about Venus:

1. The irregular dichotomy, which NO ONE can predict.
2. The "Ashen light of Venus".

This is a bizarre one. It relates to a mysterious light which shines under the Venusian atmosphere, and which lights up its DARK side.

The mysterious lights on Venus are many, and extremely weird. The Maedler phenomenon is my favorite, and I am quite happy with the solution I have proposed -- it explains the RARITY of the phenomenon, and explains, exactly, it's relationship to the Inner sun. It remains one of the finest proofs that Venus has two holes and a central Sun shining out from inside Venus. It was documented by a very famous astronomer, Maedler, who was well known for the accuracy of his observations.

Even the Venera photos of the surface of Venus show there is MORE LIGHT on the surface of Venus than was expected. How did light get through the thick cloud canopy? Chances are it is refracted light from the Inner sun, lighting up all of the outside of Venus -- by way of the refraction of light, as caused by an atmospheric pressure of 90 Earth atmospheres!

One part of the Old Theory, which remains intact, and totally uncompromised, is the idea of the Earth's magnetic field originating from a hole in the Earth's crust. The magnetic field thus flows out from the northern hole into the southern hole. Where the old Hollow Earth theorists went wrong was in keeping to the idea that the magnetic field came from the rim of a GEOGRAPHICAL NORTH POLE.

For HUNDREDS of years, the magnetic field has been measured from London and Paris. This pointed directly in the direction of the Northern Territories of Canada ALWAYS. If the hole was at the geographical north pole, then in Europe, the magnetic field would have pointed to the geographical north -- and it never did. The magnetic field has ALWAYS come from the north of Canada.

Raymond Bernard latched on to a Russian claim to have found a SECOND magnetic north pole near Russia. He thus used this to claim that the magnetic field originated from a huge hole stretching from Russia to Canada. However, why didn't EUROPEANS find a similar 'pole' to the north of Europe?

All that Gardner and the others had to consider was the idea that the hole was offset from the North pole.

They were fooled, in part, by the stories of the increased heat as one goes northwards. Probably they felt that if there's a hole, that the Earth MUST rotate ABOUT THE HOLE.

But does it need to? And here, we go back to the Chandler Wobble. An offset hole (two actually), will cause an imbalance in the Earth's mass distribution. Could these two holes in any way be related to the Chandler Wobble and the reason it's ALWAYS THERE?

There seems to me to be an innate connection between the Pole Shift idea and the Hollow planet theory. The holes are not that large that the Earth MUST revolve around them. But they could provide interesting imbalances.

On Uranus, its poles point directly at the Sun. When it recently turned around to face the Sun, and was seen from the Earth, the NORTH POLE WAS FOUND TO BE HOTTER THAN ANY OTHER PART OF THE PLANET'S VISIBLE SURFACE! The heat of course must come from inside the planet! There is no other source.

If the Earth's magnetic field originates from the inner sun, and thus takes the path of least resistance out to the surface -- by means of the two gigantic holes, it could just as easily move out by means of the volcanic tunnels which must stretch through the crust onto the surface of the Inner Earth. If there are vast caverns, tunnels, etc., then SOME MAGNETISM must then escape by that route. A map of the Earth shows the magnetic field varying from place to place, but some areas are having a stronger magnetic field than other areas. The question then becomes: Could variations in the magnetic field thus point us in the direction of holes, tunnels, etc. and provide us with a pointer -- a directional sign -- into the Inner Earth?

Similar phenomenon occur at sea, where some areas have tremendously stronger magnetism. Could this point to holes in the ocean floor?

Geologists think of strong magnetism as being due to rocks, metals, etc.. However, that might be true only SOME of the time. Other times you may well have stumbled upon a route to the Inner Earth?

Bothered by "the HUM?" Kenwood Electronics has developed headphones using noise cancellation technology. Originally designed for travellers to block out noise in planes, trains and cars, a flick of the switch on one of the ear cups, will generate a soundwave that cancels out the soundwave of the ambient noise before it reaches the human ear. Annoying "white noise" and hum disappears, including noise from computer towers and monitors.

A Tomb and Time Travel

Shrouded by trees in the middle of London's Brompton cemetery, stands a strange, imposing structure carved with elaborate Egyptian-like figures that have been exciting the interest of writers and researchers.

The 150-year-old mausoleum is the only one in the cemetery for which no plans can be found. Its occupants are a mysterious trio of spinsters about whom almost nothing is known.

Intrigued by the tomb, writer Hoard Webster began researching its origins and now believes the 6.5 metre tall building was a time machine built by a maverick Victorian genius, Samuel Warner, who also invented the torpedo.

Warner is buried in an unmarked grave some 20 metres from his creation and in another nearby grave lies his likely collaborator, architect and Egyptologist Joseph Bonomi.

Warner apparently died in poverty despite claiming to have invented a sea mine the size of a duck egg and an aerial bomb that could be dropped from balloons onto naval targets. He even demonstrated his weapons, blowing up ships to the amazement of government officials who hoped to buy the plans. Warner was demanding £400,000 and the talks eventually collapsed in acrimony.

The cause of his death is not known but Webster is convinced he was killed to prevent the plans for his weapons, which were never found, from falling into enemy hands.

The mausoleum has not been opened for more than 120 years. Bonomi's gravestone bears similar hieroglyphics including the Egyptian god of the dead, Anubis, sitting on what appears to be a replica of the mausoleum. Webster believes this a vital clue to the mausoleum's secret.

He believes the wealthy Courtoy spinsters, an unbarred mother and her two daughters, financed Warner's time machine, which he developed with Bonomi's help. Bonomi was part of the team that first deciphered the hieroglyphic texts found on papyri in Egypt's Valley of the Kings.

The belief that ancient Egyptians had uncovered the secret of time travel was widespread in Victorian times and still had adherents today. The 1994 movie STARGATE was about a time travel machine uncovered near Egyptian pyramids.

James Mackay, a cemetery official, thinks Warner managed to dupe the Courtoy spinsters into believing he could build them a time machine. But he concedes there are great mysteries surrounding the mausoleum.

If Warner did believe he was building a time machine, "his choice of the cemetery was a shrewd and appropriate one...it was one of the few places where one could work unobserved and where even the most eccentric of structures could be explained away," Mackay said.

Webster says he likes to believe "that Warner's is not the body in the unmarked grave but that he is still alive and travelling through time in his machine." (By Helen Smith, Reuters News Agency)
